

Adhum Carter or Adhum Carter Wolde-Lule, is a British business-magnate, investor, strategist and financial guru. Born in 1995 in Brighton, United Kingdom, he pursued his secondary education from Lewis and has travelled extensively across multiple geographies— lived in London and Dubai, conducted businesses in Switzerland, Hong Kong, Shanghai and other financial hubs all over the world. Adhum has a strong focus on Real estate financing and a natural flair for technology, specializing in international trade, investments, mezzanine finance, capital raises and development. He's dabbled with mixed asset classes professionally and his personal investments vary from the food industry to car trading companies.

Adhum majorly works with high-net individuals, extremely affluent clients, and family offices and private or publicly held funds. With his courtly demeanor and gentlemanly manners along with a flair for problem solving, he's been regarded by his peers and associates as an invaluable asset when it comes to dealing with people and getting them out of tough, financial spots. Adam relies on his financial ingenuity and portfolio investment knowledge to help companies curb redundancies and exponentially grow in the long-term. His present aspirations are to raise capital for companies and introduce strategic growth, to become a Venture Capitalist and fund new, innovative, high potential ideas and companies and he also seeks to set up funds for distressed real estate companies and developers by offering Mezzanine debt financing, which he is naturally adept at.

Growing up in an affluent family, Carter realized the main point of inherited wealth, early on— it's to help others who are of lesser means and in need. It might seem that great wealth is somewhat of a privilege, but Adham knew that there were dues to be paid, the price of bearing responsibility for that wealth and using it to make his surroundings better. Adhum is not merely interested in making the rich-richer but more than that, he aspires to make financial structures simpler, reliable and profitable for the stakeholders, which ultimately are the people. Beyond that, Adhum wants to protect and safeguard the interests of industries like real estate which are always tumultuous and subject to business losses. He aims at providing help and succor in times of financial ruin and distress through Mezzanine financing which he personally excels in. The bigger picture is always that of economic boom, wealth generation and financial prosperity and giving second chances to those who have been knocked out unfairly or unjustly and Adhum is a stringent proponent of that kind of working ideology and principle. Adhum has his share of critics and detractors, but that does not deter him from reaching his goals, which are big, expansive and require strong will and determination. In a short period of time, Adhum has managed to leave his stamp in the financial game unlike any other financier of his age, today. With time Adhum seeks to spread his wings further and wider and explore new markets and areas and industries that need his expertise and due diligence, one he knows best.
